Reproductive and Sexual Health Law

2006-2007 Supplement

Professor R.J. Cook and Joanna Erdman
Faculty of Law, University of Toronto

This course addresses national and international legal protection and promotion of reproductive and sexual health. It examines the comprehensive nature of reproductive health, including fertility control and promotion, treatment of sexually transmitted diseases, such as HIV/AIDS, and abusive sexual relations. The course provides introductory overviews of the background law and its interaction with ethical principles. The course surveys different disciplinary dimensions, such as biomedical, epidemiological and social science perspectives that can be used in the development and application of reproductive and sexual laws. It analyzes the effectiveness of the law in protecting groups at high risk of reproductive health disadvantages, such as adolescents.

Texts:

Cook RJ, Dickens BM and Fathalla MF. Reproductive Health and Human Rights: Integrating Medicine, Ethics and Law. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2003 (Green book), updates available at: <http://www.law.utoronto.ca/faculty/cook/ReproductiveHealth.html>

2006-2007 Supplement

Structure:

Part 1: Introduction (September 6, 13)

Part 2: Legal Origins and Principles (September 20, 27; October 4, 11)

Part 3: Substantive Human Rights Principles (October 18, 25; November 1, 15)

Part 4: Case Studies in Reproductive and Sexual Health Law (November 22, 29)

Evaluation:

All students must complete four short assignments (3 pages) related to the readings (15%).

The balance of the evaluation (85%) will be based on:

a research paper or legal memorandum (approximately 20 pages) or a 48 hour take-home examination to be signed out from and returned to the Records Office. The examination may be taken during any 48 hour period between the first day of the examination period and due no later than the set deadline for written work in the applicable term (see Take-home Policy in the Syllabus for details)
